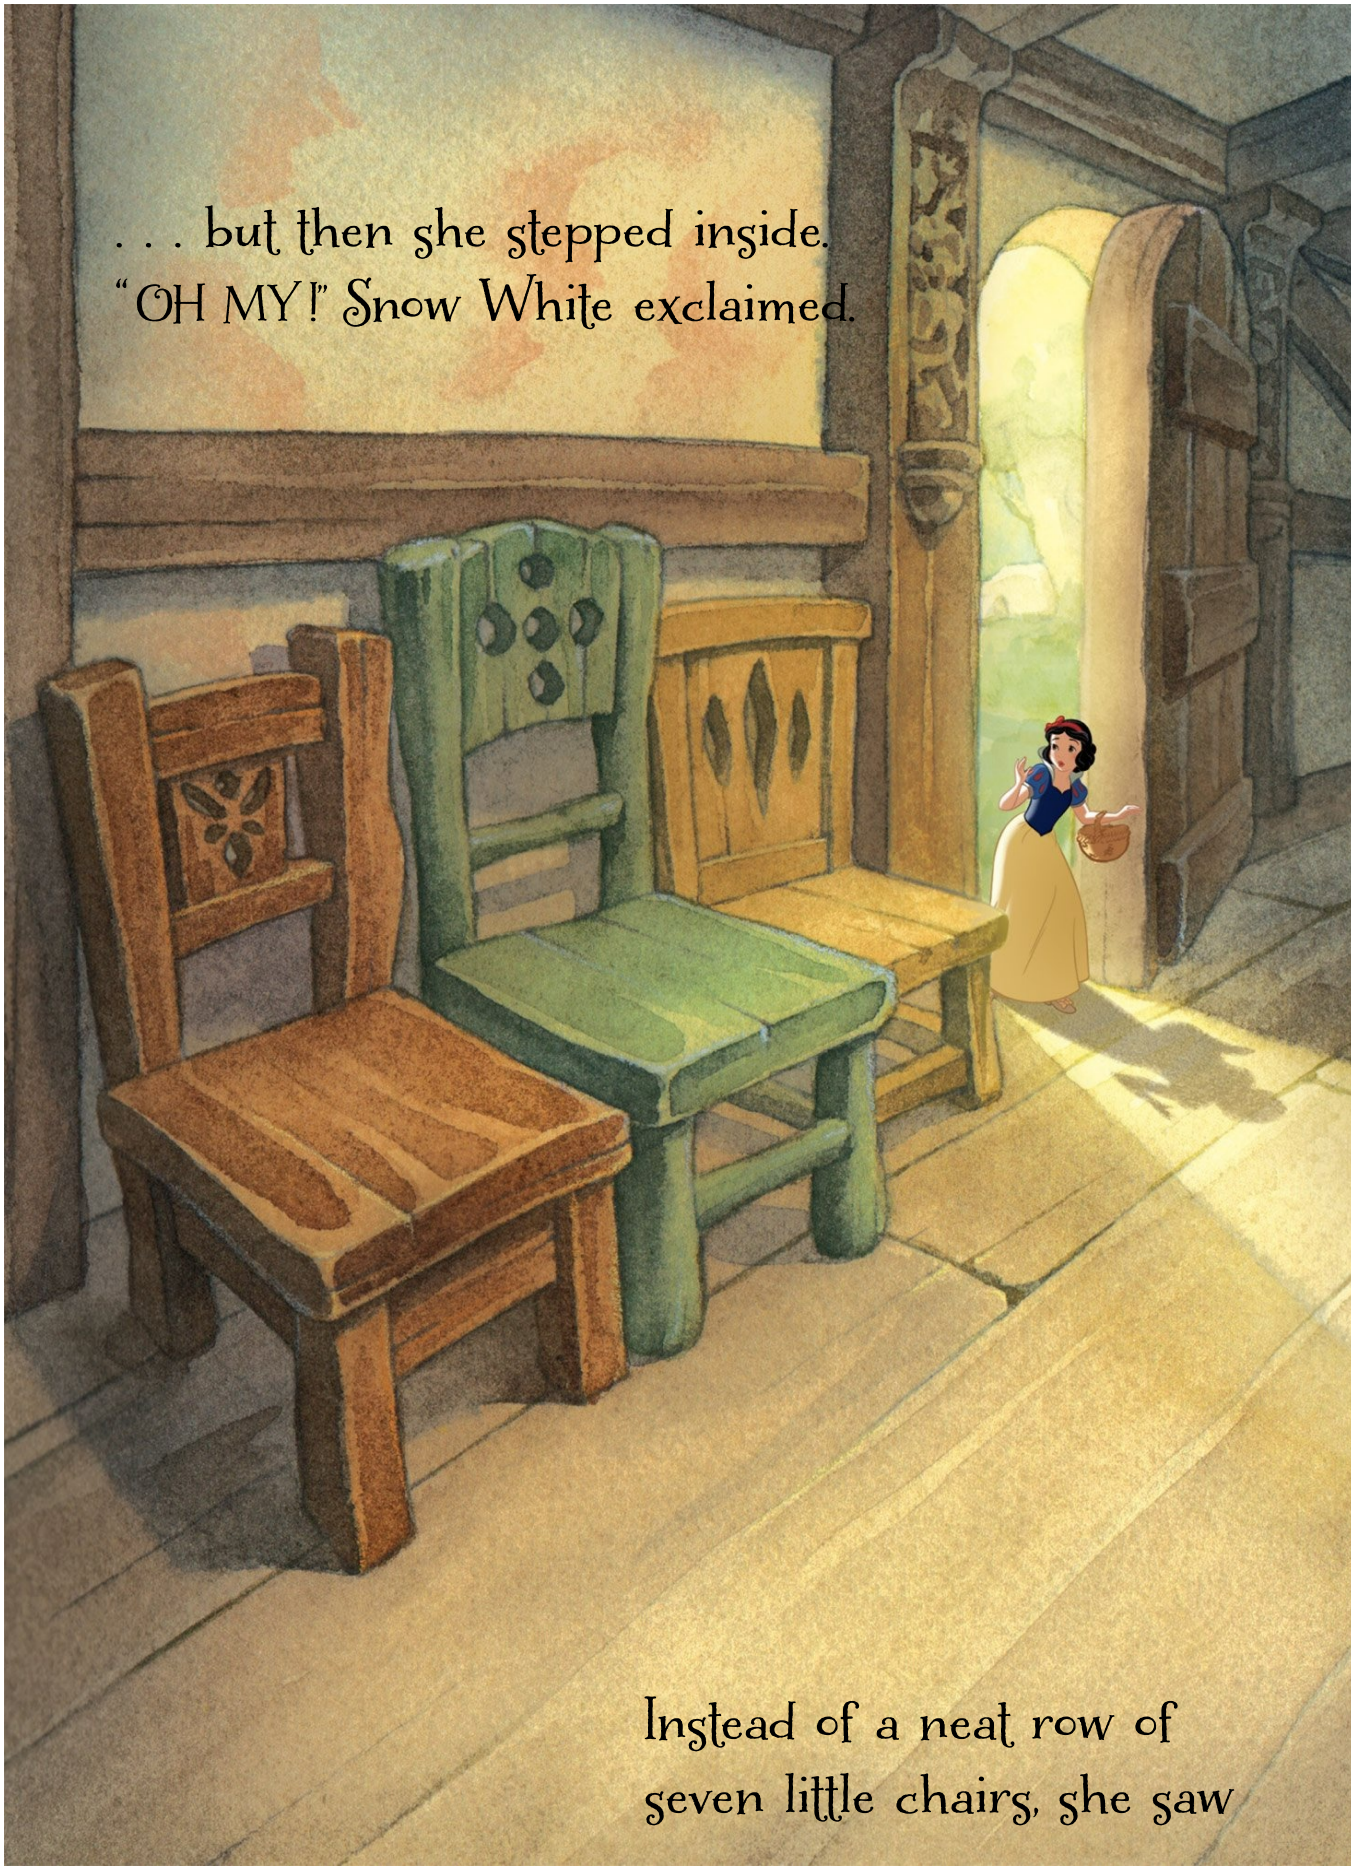
SINCE MEETING THE DWARFS LONG AGO, Snow White knew the path to their cottage well. But one day, because she was busy talking to the woodland creatures, she took a wrong turn.

She arrived at a VERY different cottage instead.



. . . but then she stepped inside.
"OH MY!" Snow White exclaimed.
Instead of a neat row of seven little chairs, she saw

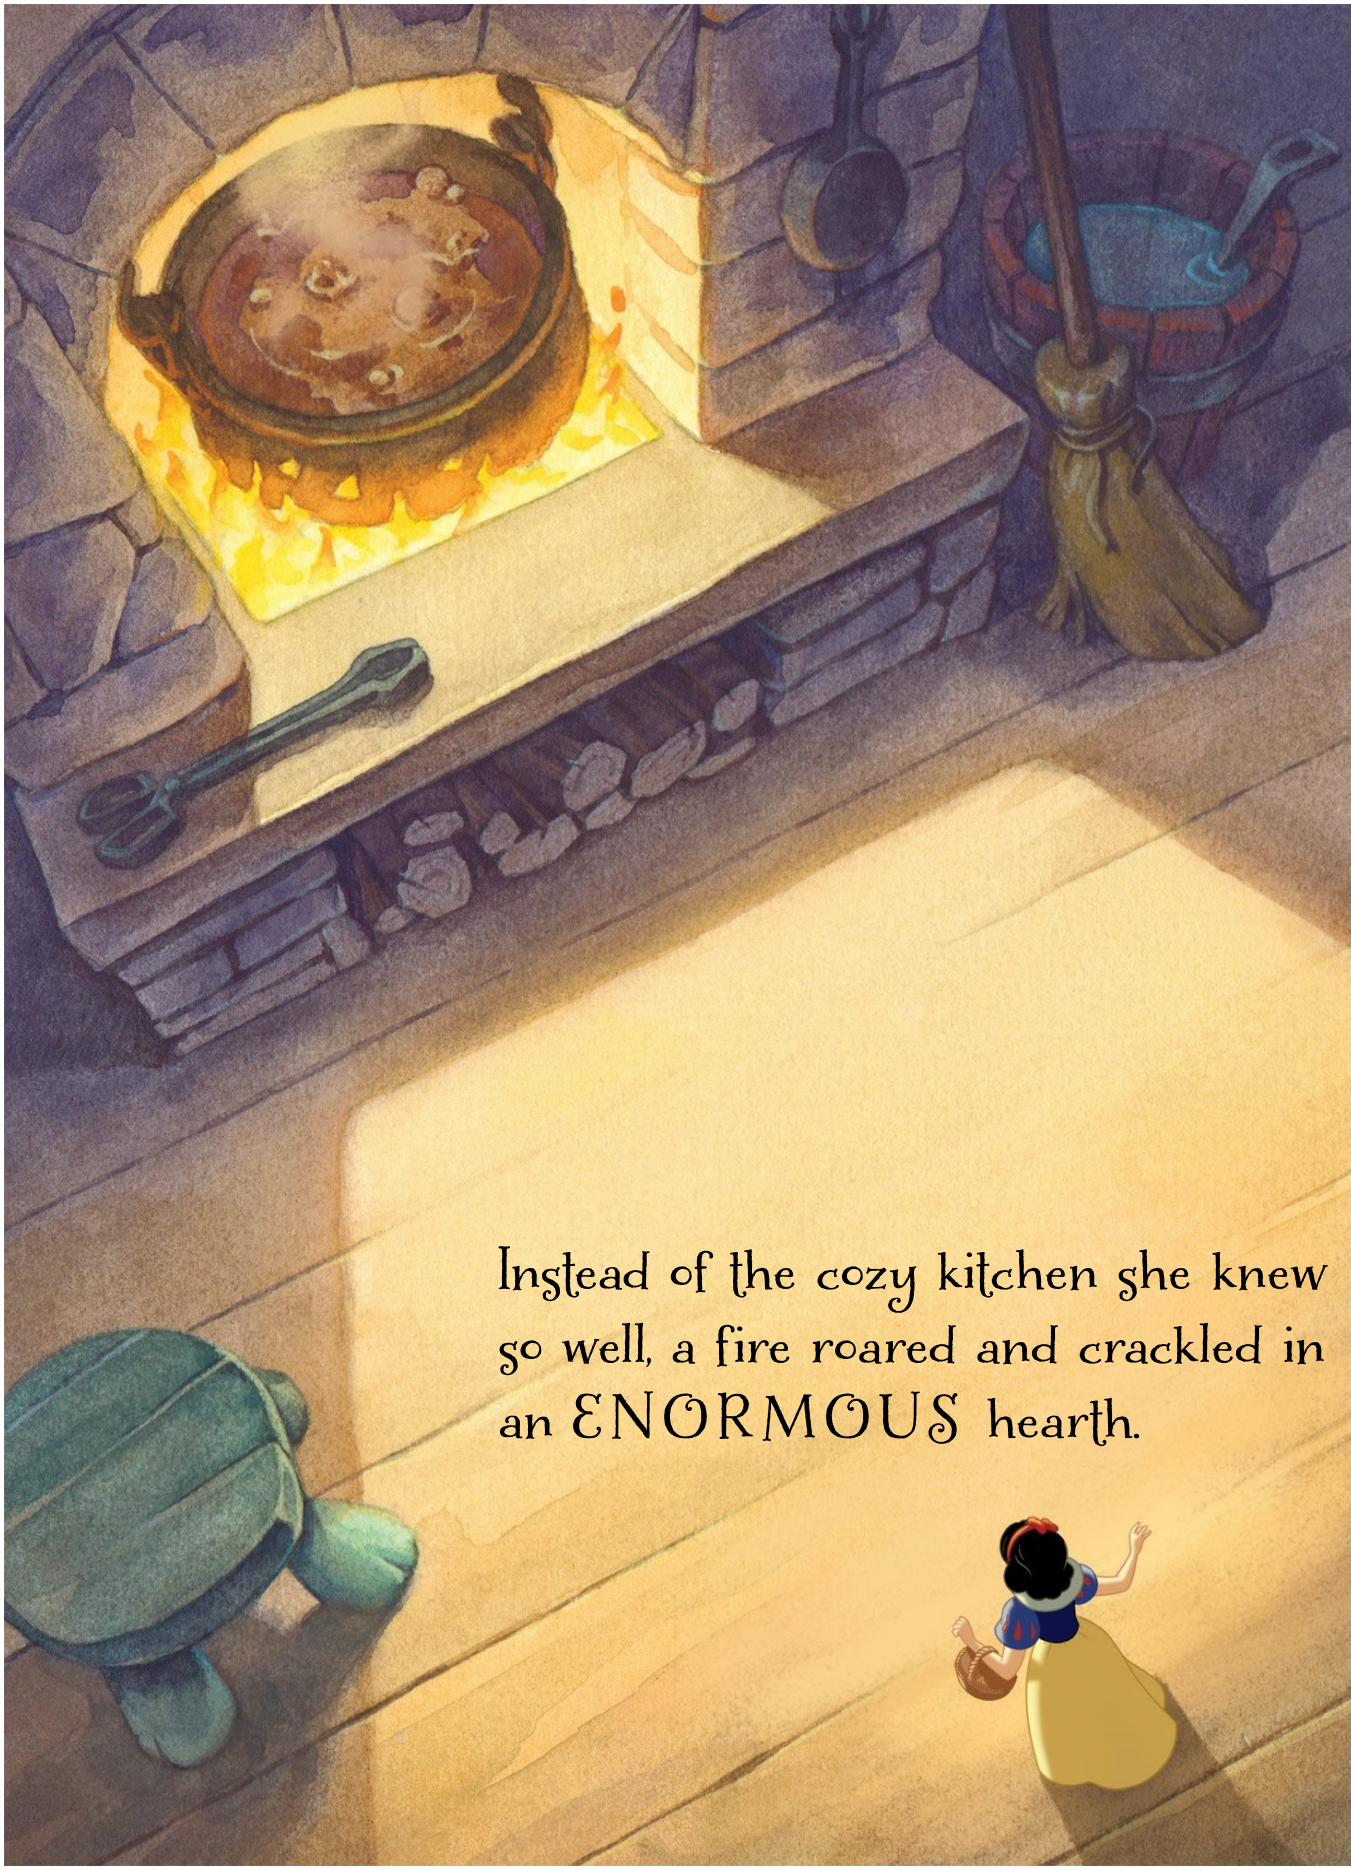
three ENORMOUS chairs.



Instead of the cozy kitchen she knew so well, a fire roared and crackled in an ENORMOUS hearth.

Then, just as Snow White discovered the enormous dining table, the ground began to shake.

"OH NO!" she gasp

With a groan, the door opened and in came three of the TALLEST people Snow White had ever seen.
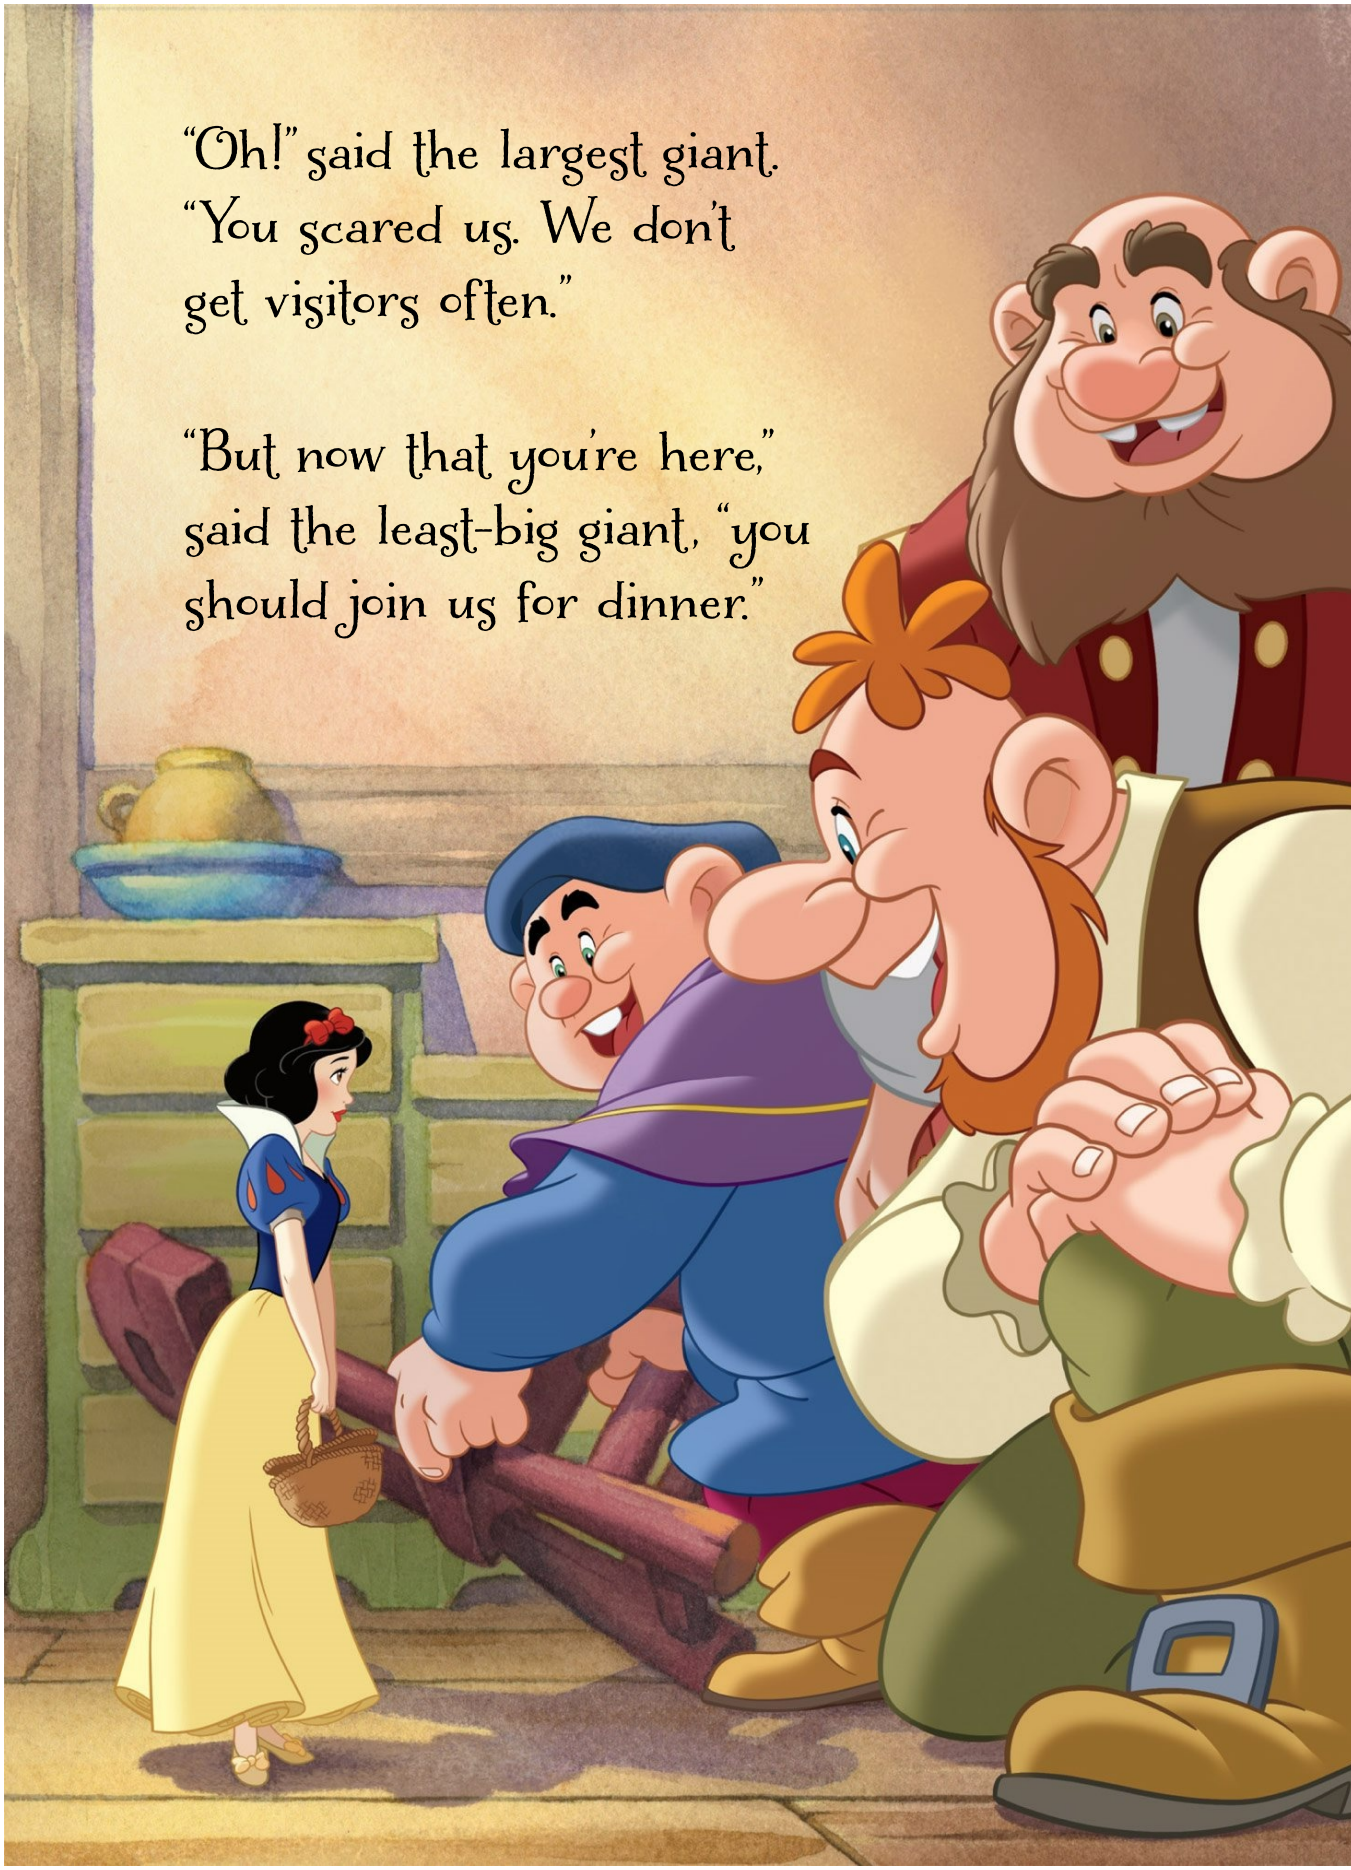
They lumbered straight toward her.

WHAT SHOULD I DO NOW? thought Snow White.

Snow White cleared her throat and stepped into view. "Excuse me," she said.

"I let myself in by mistake."



"Oh!" said the largest giant.
"You scared us. We don't get visitors often."
"But now that you're here,"
said the least-big giant, "you should join us for dinner."

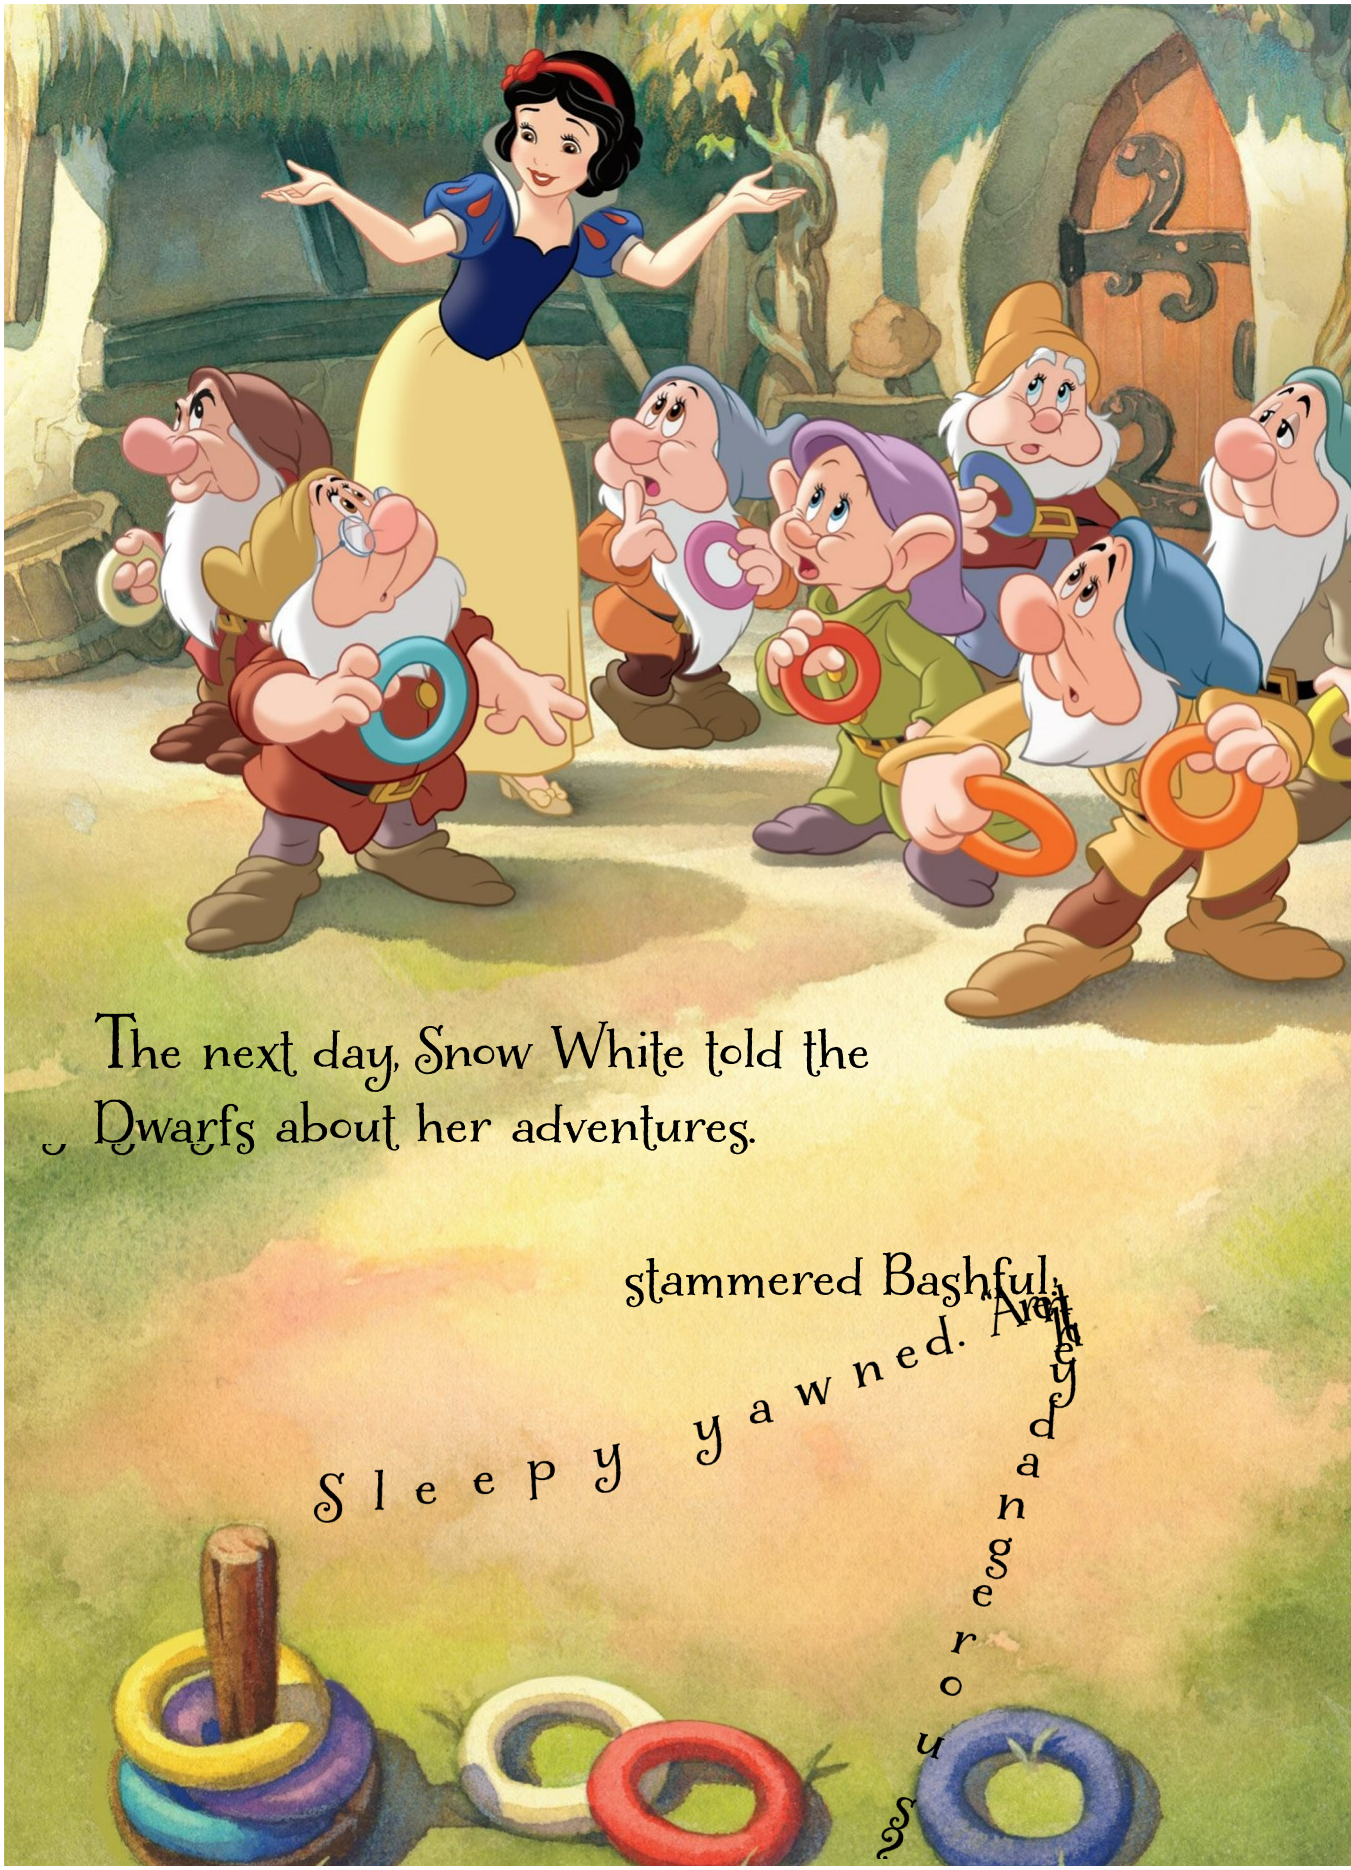
The least-big giant helped her climb up on his chair. "You'll need some cushions," he said.

"And here is a small plate and glass," said the middle-sized giant.

"Thank you," said Snow White.

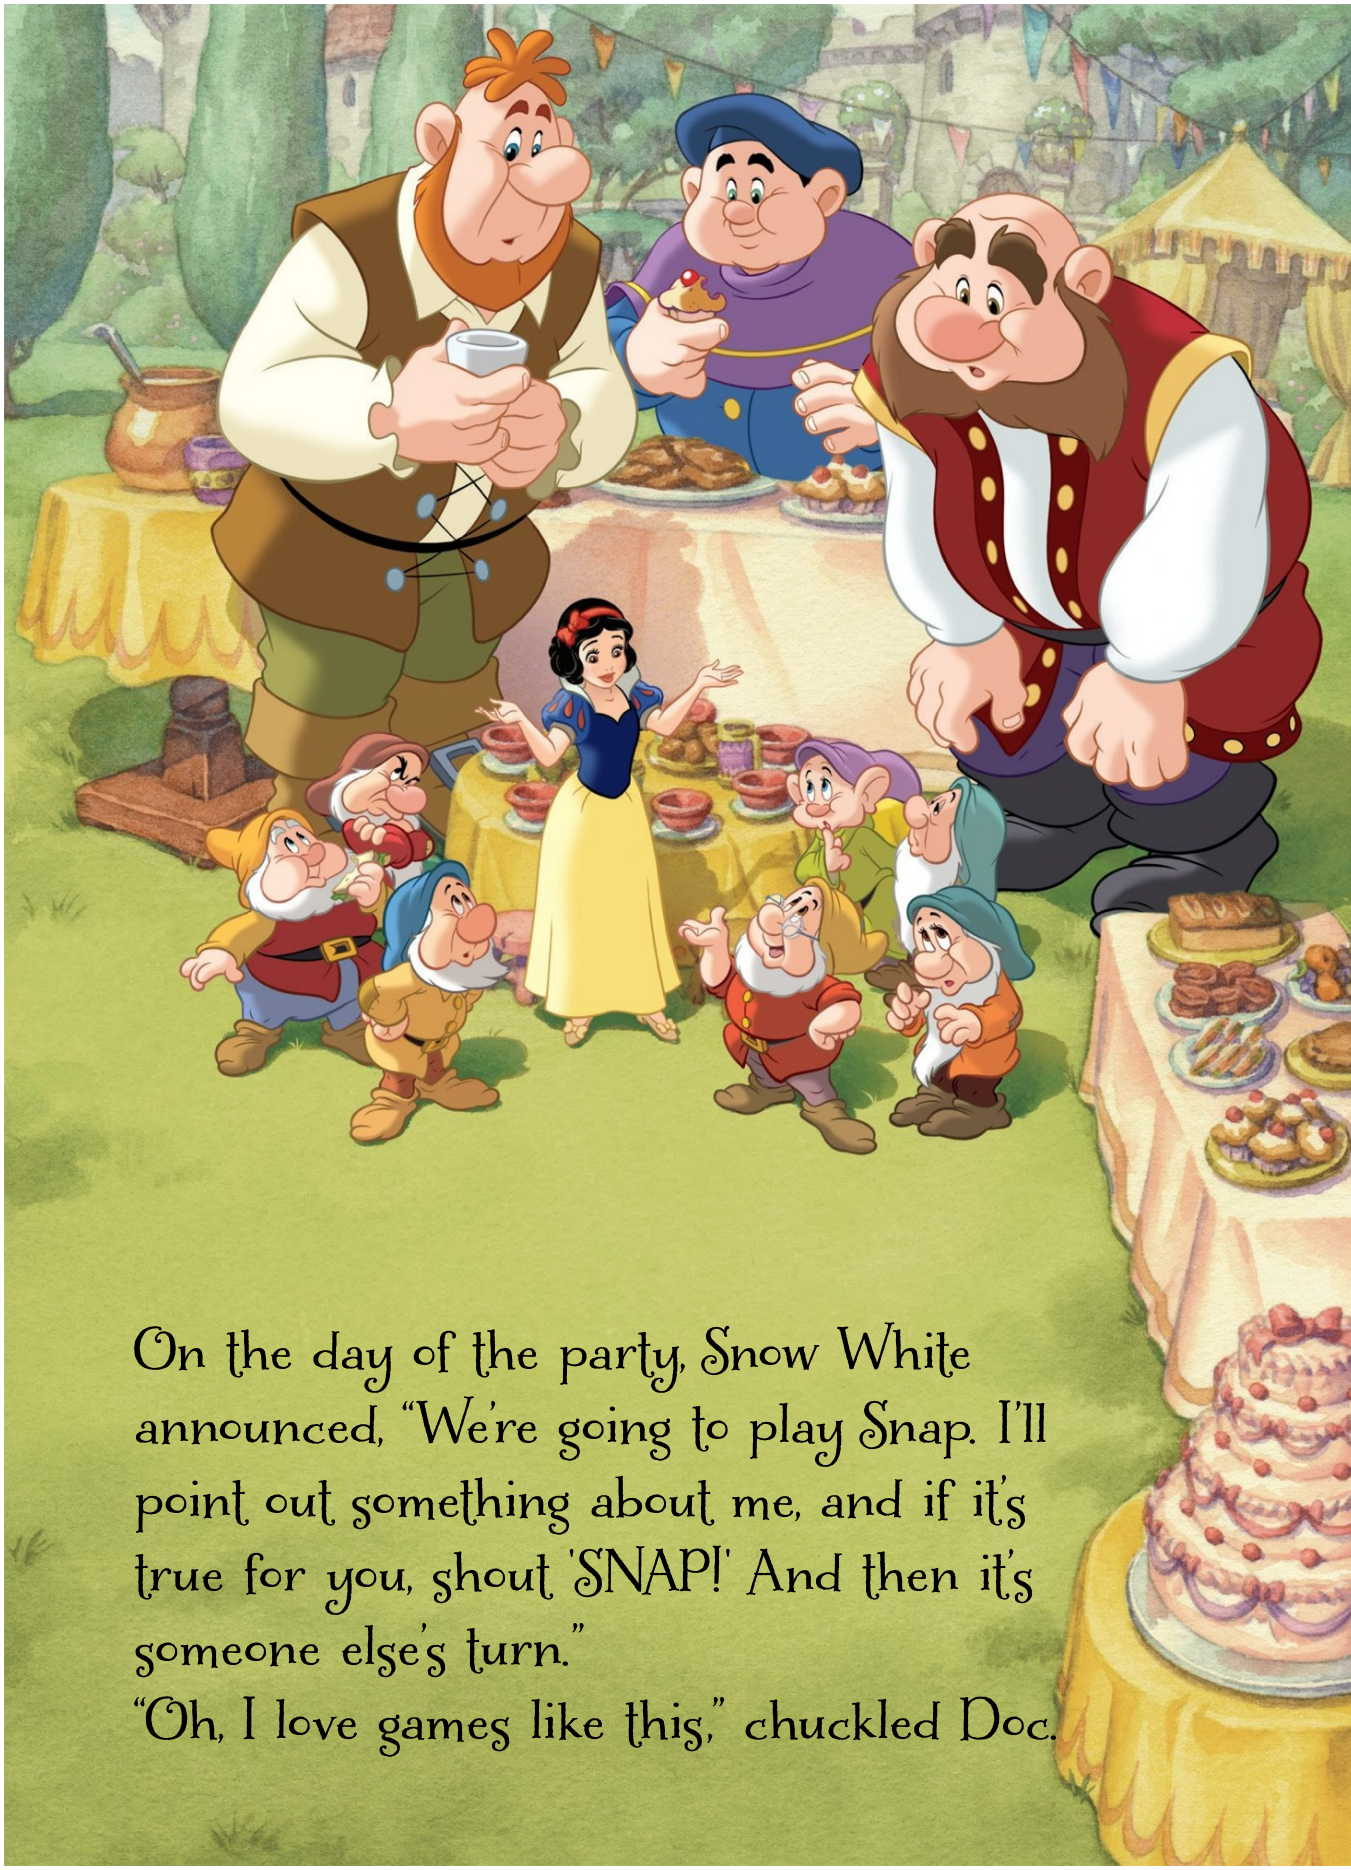
"You're all so kind!"



The next day, Snow White told the Dwarfs about her adventures.
stammered Bashful.
Sleepy yawned.
Grumpy

"Don't trust them!" Grumpy said. "You can't TRUST anyone that I can't."

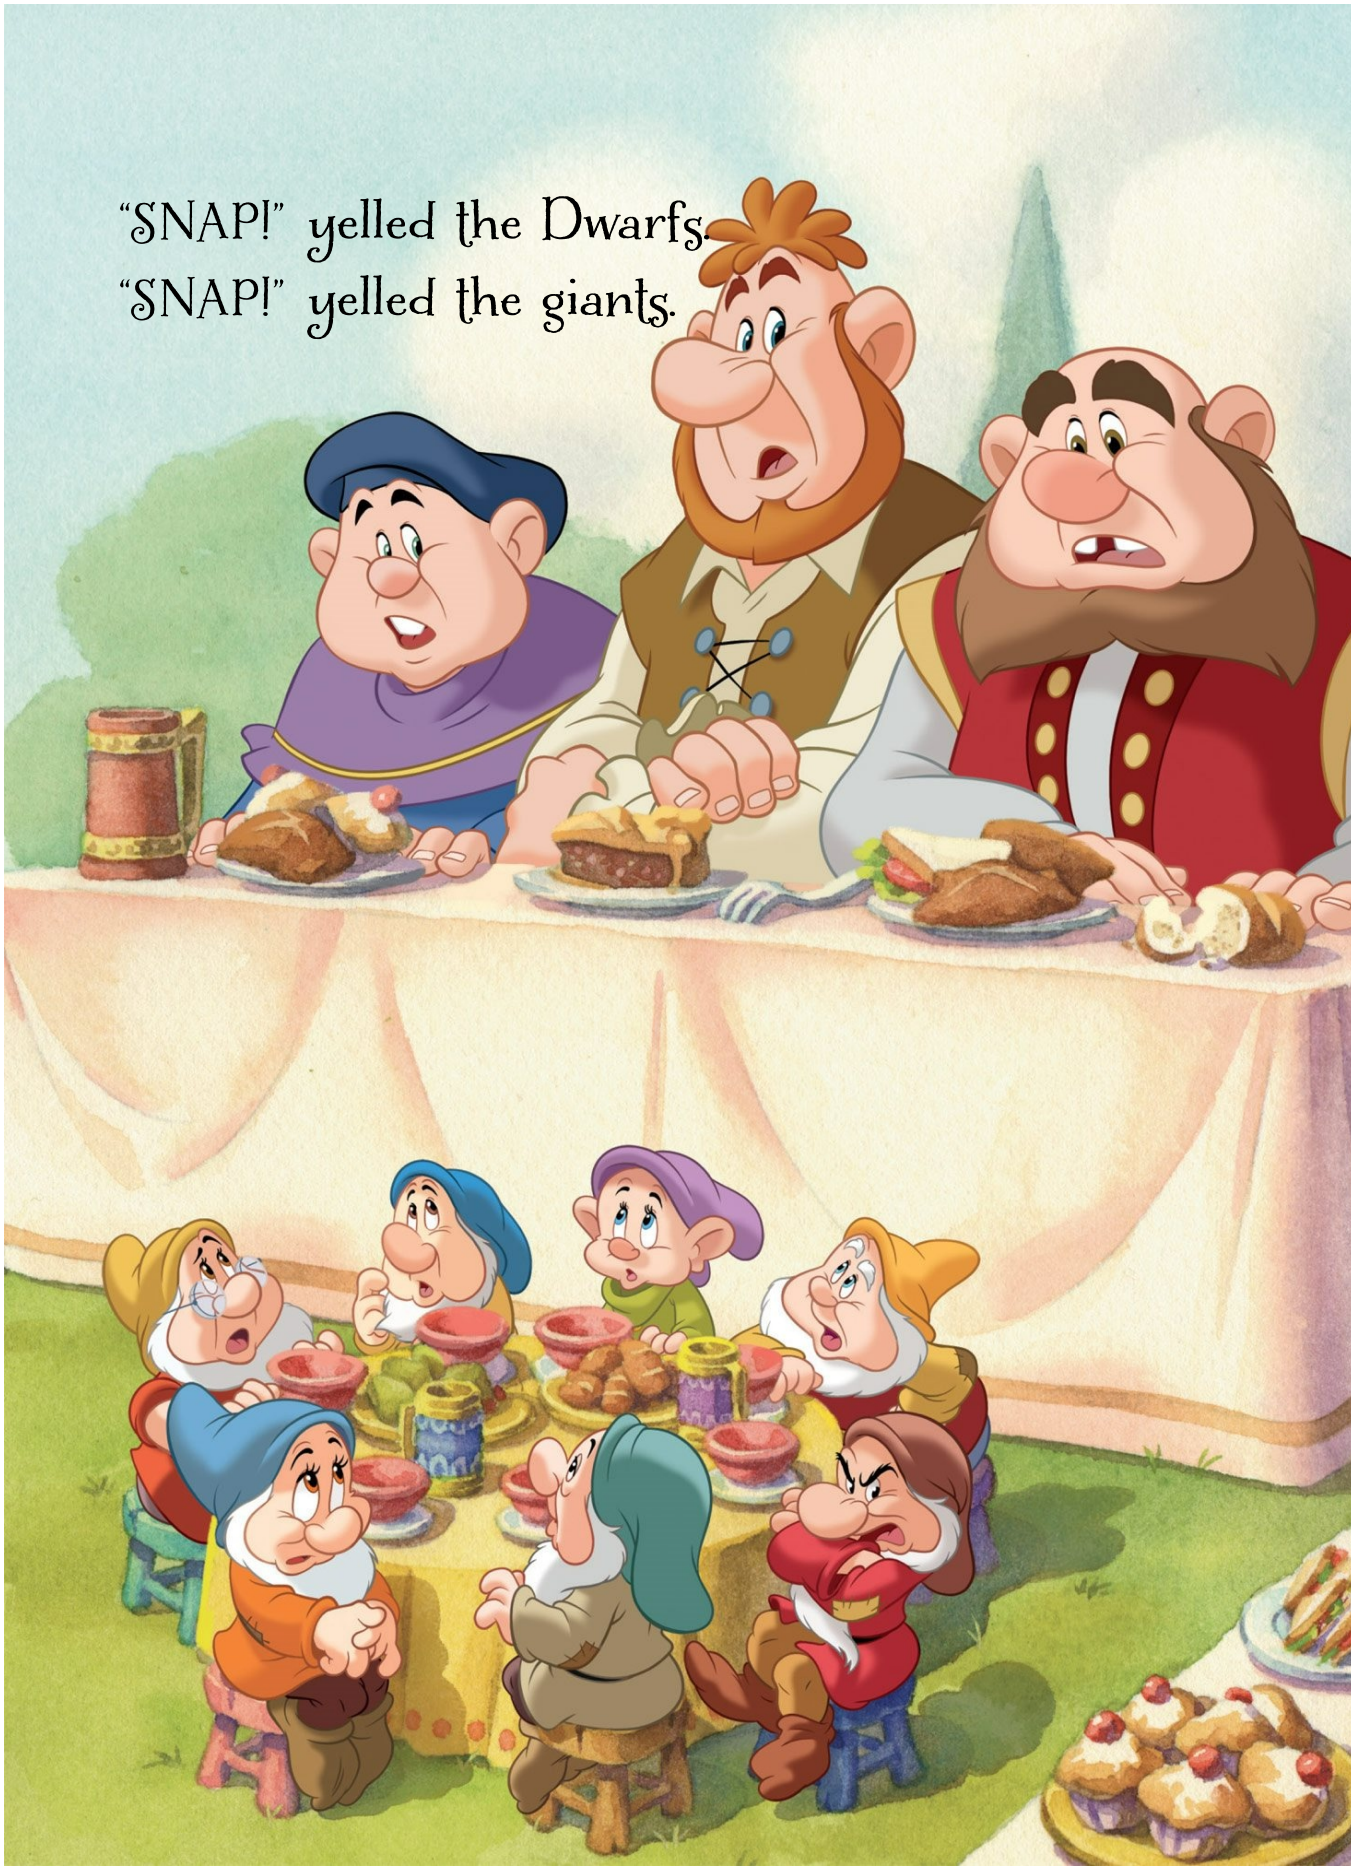
Back at the castle, Snow White addressed ten party invitations and made a list of the delicious food she'd make. All she needed now was a game to get everyone laughing.



On the day of the party, Snow White announced, "We're going to play Snap. I'll point out something about me, and if it's true for you, shout 'SNAP!' And then it's someone else's turn."

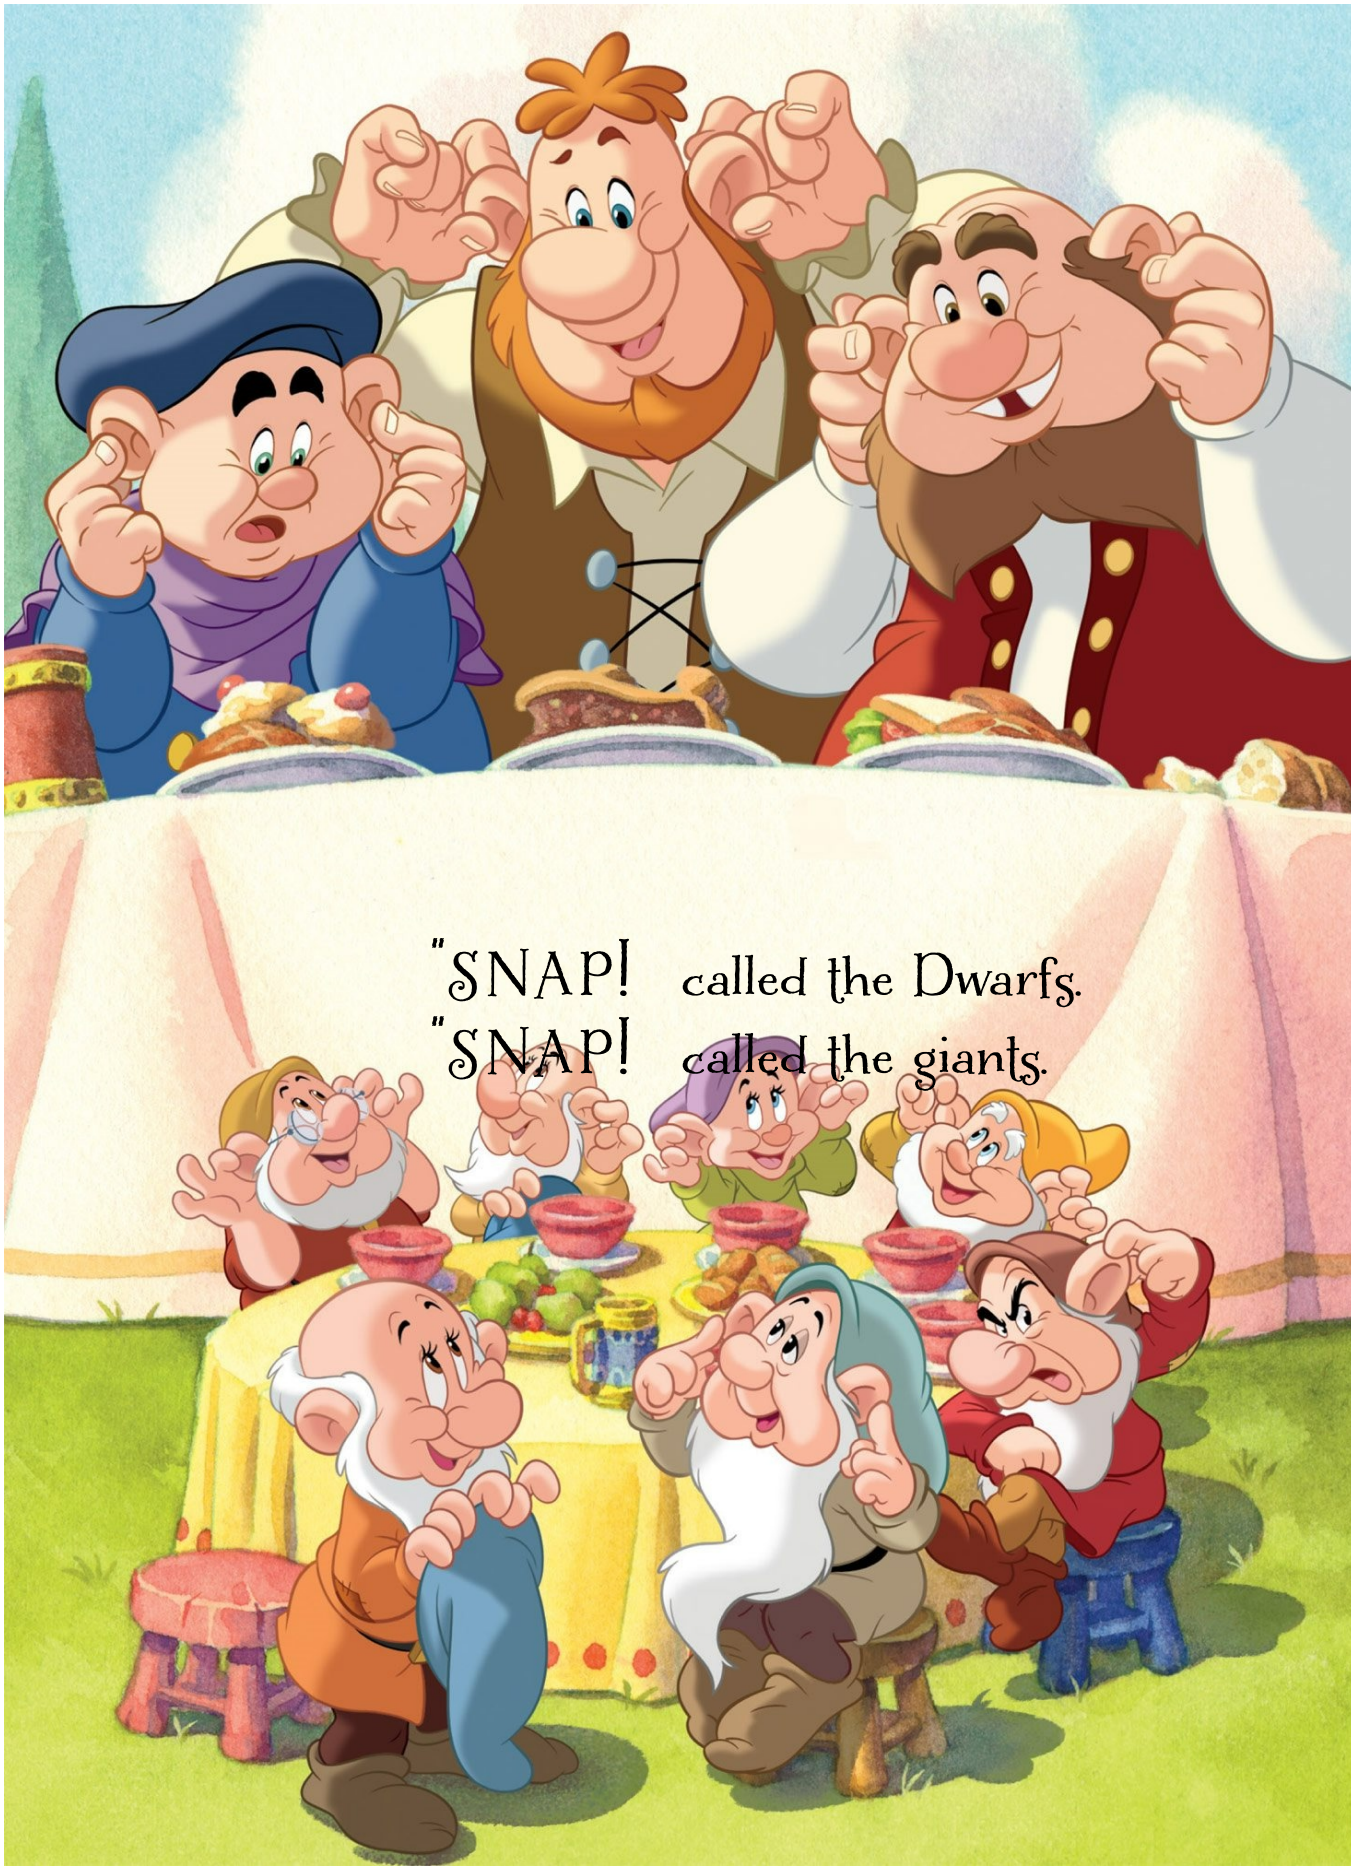
"Oh, I love games like this," chuckled Doc.

"Here we go," said Snow White.



"SNAP!" yelled the Dwarfs.
"SNAP!" yelled the giants.

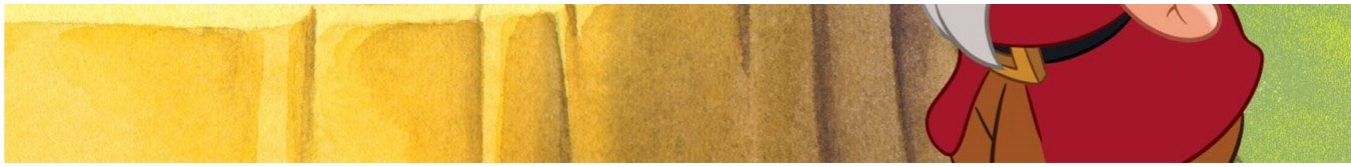
"Um, I have two ears."

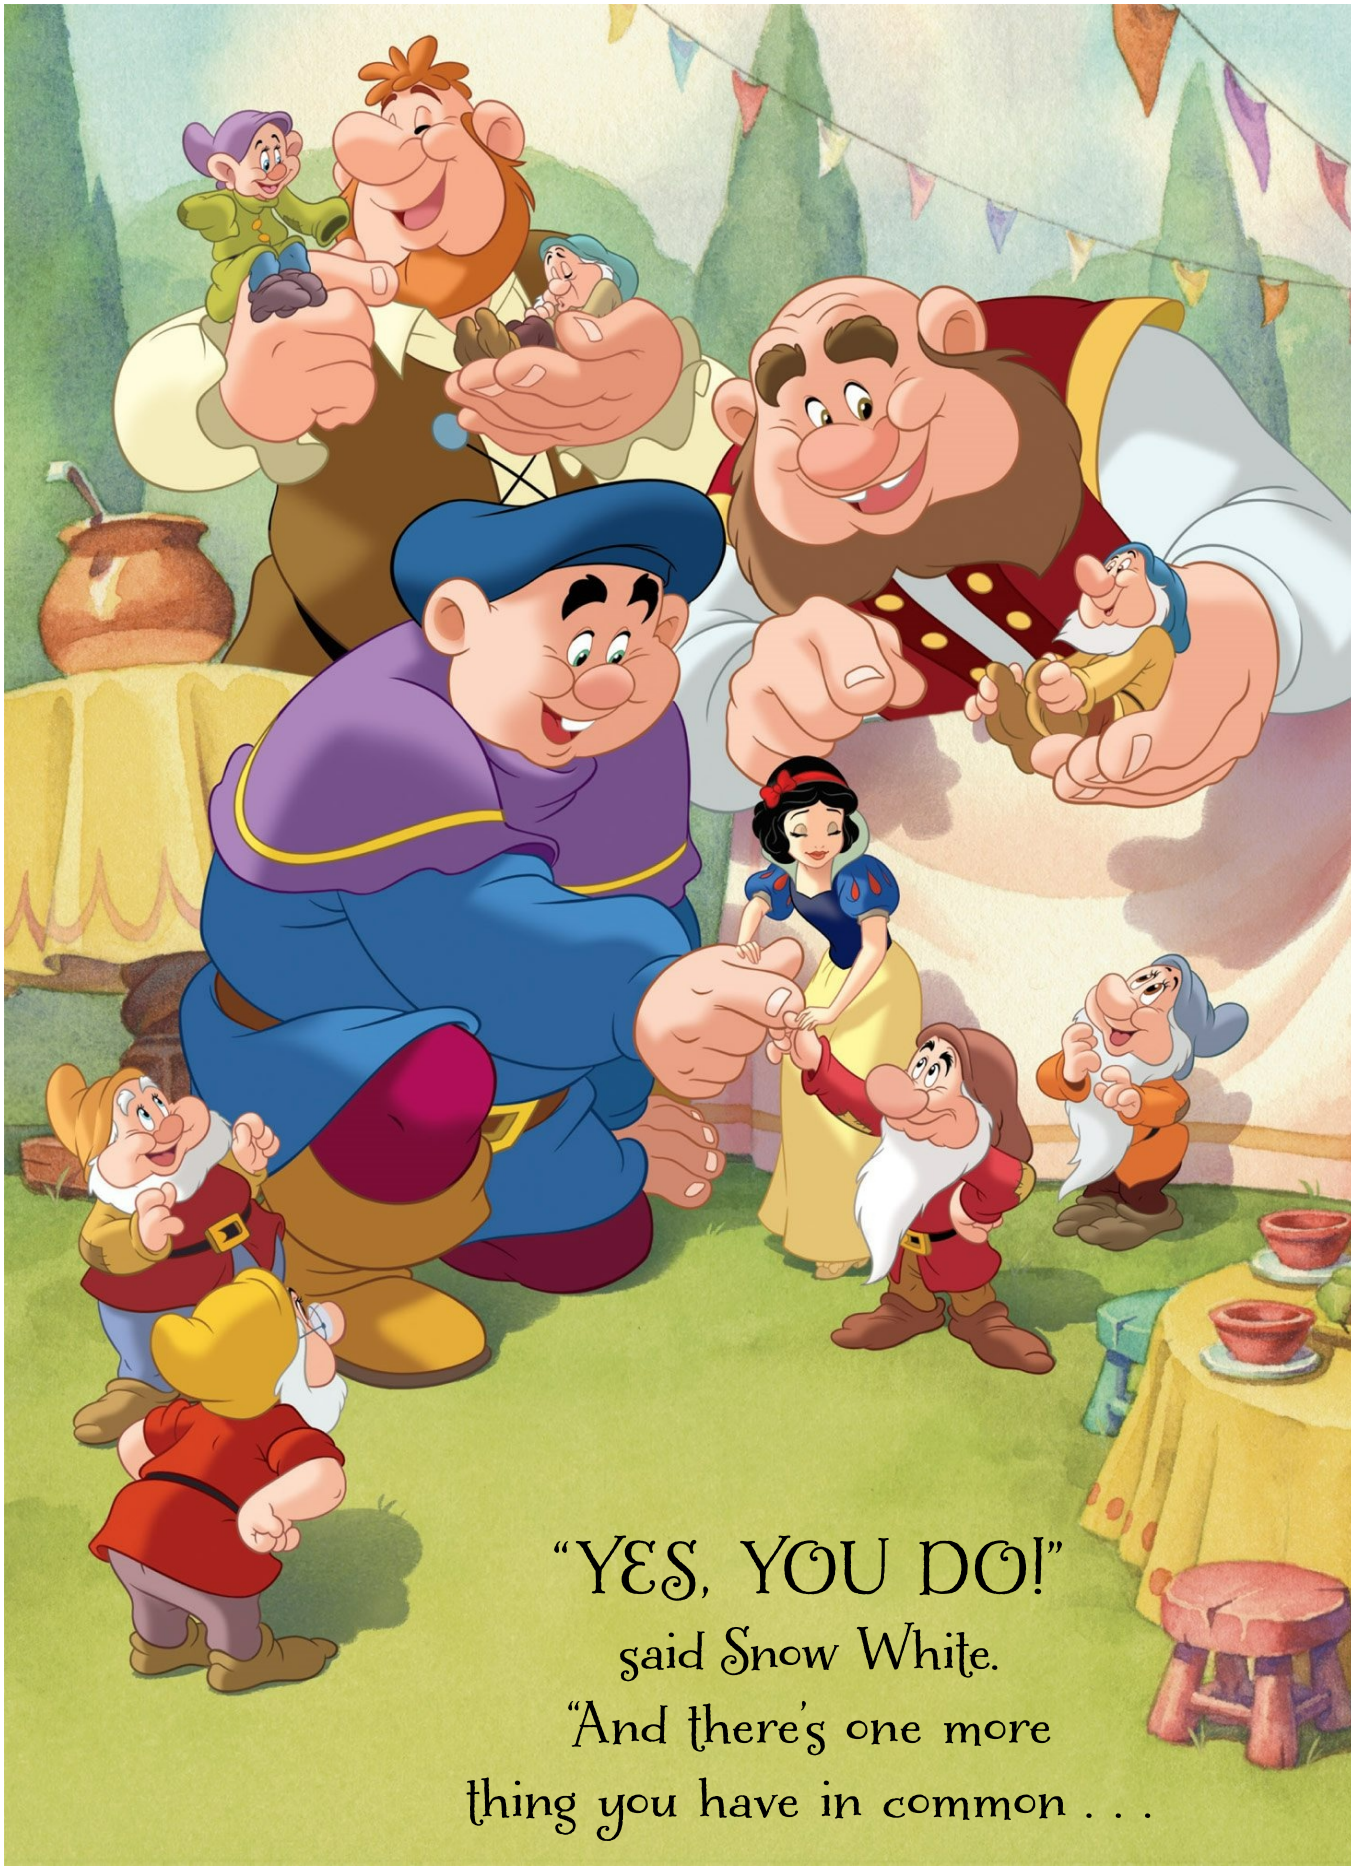


"SNAP! called the Dwarfs.
"SNAP! called the giants.

It was the largest giant's turn.

"SNAP!" shouted the Dwarfs. "SNAP!" shouted the giants.





"YES, YOU DO!"
said Snow White.
"And there's one more thing you have in common . . .

you are ALL my FRIENDS!"
